EDINBURGH.

Extract of a letter from London, April 20.

The exercions that are daily nightly, and hourly made by Mr Fox, and his male and female friends are aftonishing. This day has added a new proof to the power of perfeverance. There are not warning many who link the fallen Man of the There are not writing many who tank the tatter wan in the people will yet come off triumphane. It is faid, that his friends blame him very middle for bending all his efforts to his own election for Westminster. It ad be spared some part of his time and attention to other elections, and obsessioned and directed the measures of his party in general, a more formidable oppo-fition, they think, would have appeared in the new Parha-

is is evident that the Coalition is much weakened. The friends that Lord North had attached to his perfon, by introducing them into Parliament for ministerial burghs, no longer give him dignity and weight in Panjainen. These engines of Parliamentary power have strengthened the hands of the present Ministry. We must not, however, imagine, that though the coalition party is diminished, Ministry will be long unopposed. A new opposition, formed on new grounds, and per-haps led by new man, most succeed. This summer will pro-bably pals over without any great buffle in the House of Commona. Ministry will impose new cases: the popular current in their favour will abate; and, in the beginning of the year 17854 we shall fee a pretty swong opposition to the court party. It was well that Parliament was disclosed before the laying on of taxes taxes are already enormous. A person in Scotland can have no idea of the taxes that oppress England, and especially the metropolis. I do not fee how the people can have that increase of taxes which the profusion of the Court demands, and inor taxes which the profution of the Court demands, and indeed, public credit requires. The good people of England contend, with a commendable foirt, for the forms of liberty, hat yield to the gradual engreate of public burdens. In this manner, however, the foundations of freedom may be fapped.

It is possible, by multiplying taxes, to draw almost the whole money of the kingdom into the public Treasury; the mamagement and disposal of which, in fact, might enslave the nation. The Grand Signing expect impose new taxes. The tion. The Grand Signior cannot impose new taxes. The English Parliament slips a new burthers on the people every Thursday forenoon, a malt-kiln in the College-wynd took free days a see that the control of the second of the seco the damage would have been very confiderable.

We hear from Carron, that, on Thursday last, Robert Ure, nafter of a collier, on his passage from Grangemouth to Lime kilns, unfortunately fell overboard, and was drowned. He had only one man on board with him who brought the velled fafe into Limekilus. This melantholy accident was occasioned by the boat's perner giving aray, and lofing his balance while he attempted to get hold of the boat again.

attempted to get note of the boar again.

On Saturday Laff, another mad dog made his appearance in the threets of Chagow, and bit a man and three children. The Magiffrates of Chagow have ordered all dogs that thall appear on the threets to be killed, and give a reward of two fulfilings for every dog that is killed, which, it is hoped, will but a hop to the foreasting of to dreadful a metady.

Beiwixt Sunday night and Monday morning, fonce person or persons broke into the Liaigh-kirk fession house, Glasgow, or perions broke into the Lizigh-kirk fellion-house, Glasgow, by a back window; and, forcing open a press, stole from theme the collection made for the poor the day preseding. Some people having doubted the ruth of the accounts published of the Aerial Navigators, although these accounts are well authenticated, an opportunity will probably soon occur of fatisfying them by ocular proof. Mr Tyrier, chymist in Edinburgh, engages, if a sufficient aumber of subscriptions are received, (which, from the number of public-spirited Ladies and Gentlemen in this city, there is little doubt of) to make an air balloon, 40 feet in diameter, and nearly 126 in circum. ference, from which he propofes to afcend from Comely Garden, on the 7th of May next. This balloon will be fitted with a rudder and wings, in order to determine how far it is possible for a person to direct his course in the air; and of confequence. whether this new discovery can be of any real siel to foriety or not. Mr Tytler is the first who has undertaken this adventure. in Britain, and the experiment of directing the course of the balloon in the air, has only been attempted by one gentleman

"Refolved unanimonally, as the opinion of this meeting.

That all debts contracted before the war ought now to be paid, with the whole interest accrued thereon. We can conceive no reason why the man who has enjoyed the property of souther without paying for it, should not make a compensation for the use of it; besides, every man of principle, who has laid it in his power, since specie became again in circulation, has paid his debts with interest; extremely hard would it be to deprive such men of the interests due to them from others, less ponetual, and perhaps lefs honeft than they.

"Refored unanimously, as the opinion of this meeting, that British debtots who have paid their money into the Loro Office, ought to be considered as other, public creditors, who have advanced their money. The depreciation of the paper money has caused many acts of Congress, and of the Degislatures of the different States, feemingly inconfiftent and just, and has rended to the great injury of maily individuals; dered inevitable, it was by means of this paper money, the great object, to obtain which our lives and fortunes were pledged, has been accomplished, and we conceive it better for every one to fit down content with his lofs, than vainly to attempt a retribution, where payments have been actually made, which would be attended with infinite litigation, and in almost every instance with injustice."

To the Printer of the Coledonian Mercury ON perufing your Monday's paper, I understand that, in Sir James Pringle's garden, there were cucumbers in for cutting. This is looked upon as no extraordinary creat in the west country; as, in Sir James Maxwell of Polick's garden, cucumbers were not only fit for cutting, but absolutely were cut on the sets of any and are constant. garden, cucumbers were not only fit for cutting, but able there were cut on the at it uit, and are now common in every Lady and Gentleman's garden of tafte in this neighbourhood. OUR inferting the following character of Mir Robertson's Poems, will oblige your hamble fervant LYCIDAS.

WERE I to give, in a few words, my opinion of their poems, I would perhaps choole the following. They poetical genius, warmed with fine fenfibility, and unit an accurate tafte. There are several passages of tender sentiment, and beautiful description, which, I am persuaded, will be acceptable to every judge of pactry. Through the whole there breathes a gentle melancholy, which, while it expresses the feelings of the author, gives an additional charm to his compolitions. Though the language of cheft points be pure, ele-gane, and harmonious, yet f think Mr R has fometimes been too ferupulous in the choice of his expressions, and sometimes too negligent in the admission of false rhymes. Indeed, too frequently do we meet with phymes, which, though authorized by the correctest writers, yet, on their account, are more allowable than just. But the greatest fault which I have to these poems is, that in a few places the language is so diffuse as to nus a 14 in Honor versity, 10 Co. L E Ca. IS PATE MALES SI INTO LATS ATEN AND
